"Stuart and Hilary filled MoonHouse studio with energy, humor and drive! It was a joy to help them get the most out of their great new songs... The album is coming out well balanced between the two artists and runs the gamut from tender ballads to hot-picking toe tappers. I wish The Flyin' A's all the success they deserve! "

The husband-and- wife duo of Hilary Claire and Stuart Adamson— better known as The Flyin' A's—are on the cusp of releasing their fourth independent full album in the Spring of 2019. As a top-shelf complement to the pair's engaging, fun, contagiously enjoyable live shows, their latest album You Drive Me Crazy has been well received on the Americana, Folk and Euro Charts.

Their latest recording project is a collection of diverse, heartfelt songs that borrows from Americana, folk, country and Texas music influences. From the rockabilly ear candy of "Heart Breaks" to the mournful lament of loss that is "Letting Go," Hilary and Stuart mine an array of melody and emotion that form a testament of endurance through the ups and downs life brings. "The songs all have a backbone built on the experiences we've faced on both sides of the fence," Hilary says. To which Stuart adds, "Our music is not just something we create, it's what we live and breath. Our songs are what get us through the highs and lows that come along with living life to it's fullest."

As their profile has grown following their 2011 album 'Til They Shut It Down, The Oakland A's baseball team attempted to dispute the spirited duo over the "A's" in their band name . In true Flyin' A's style, refusing to give up a name based on their family cattle brand, The Flyin' A's stayed strong through the legal battle. Against all odds, winning the right to stay true to their convictions, they are proud to say they fought the good fight against "the big dogs" and won.

"You Drive Me Crazy has a true Austin feel and is a real winner! ....should be a definitive breakthrough album for The Flyin' A's."
